“From Silence to Social Media: Why Nurses Must Be a Voice on Social Media”

Kelley Reep is an Acute Care Clinical Nurse Specialist within the adult critical care population at WakeMed Health & Hospitals, where she has worked for over 10 years. Her favorite thing is accomplishing practice change that is evidence-based and gives time back to nurses. She also shares her passion for nursing and advocacy on Twitter, where she has over 12, 000 followers and leads a monthly nursing chat (#TweetRN) on topics such as diversity, professional development, ethics, and improving practice. This year she presented on the topic at the national NACNS convention, and was slated to present at NTI (it was cancelled due to Covid-19). She is a member of the NCNA CNS council, and presented at a spring webinar.

In a prior life, she was a freelance writer and correspondent for print and web-based media.
